ON THE REVIVAL OF NATURAL LAW AS THE SOURCE OF LEGAL SCIENCE

Abstract: Natural law emerged in ancient times, due to the intention of the sages to establish the laws of society based on the laws of nature. At that time all science, philosophy, as well as all nature was considered from the interdisciplinary standpoint. However, the physical liquidation of the Platonic Academy changed, as time went on, views on science: it separated into autonomous and almost independent disciplines which sharply reduced the effect of its practical application. The natural and scientific sense of natural law disappeared. Today it remains virtually unused. However, the phenomenon of intellectual nature whose development is based on the laws of nature, has been discovered at the Federal Institute of Certification and Evaluation of Intellectual Property and Business (CJSC "SOIS") where Platonic traditions are being revived, which makes it possible to fully restore the role of natural law as the foundation of legal science, as well as all academic sciences and modern innovative economy.

Keywords: natural law, nature, interdisciplinarity, intellectual property, intellectual nature, systemicity, law enforcement, law-making, government, business, administration, economy.

THE ROLE OF GOVERNMENT IN REDUCING CORRUPTION AND DEVELOPING COMPETITION

Abstract: The paper focuses on the role of the government in reducing corruption and developing competition. A company's success is determined, in most cases, not only by the results of its operations, lower costs, competitiveness of its products in accordance with the requirements of consumers, but also by establishing the necessary connections with officials having the authority to issue permits for business registration and licences. Large enterprises have adapted to the current conditions, learned to circumvent laws and to overcome arising problems with the help of corruption; however, small and medium-sized businesses feel the shortcomings of a competitive environment. An institutional reform aimed at creating a modern market infrastructure, which includes reforming the public sector, gradual reduction of administrative barriers, creation of a system for disclosing information on the situation in the markets, their participants, and operations conducted, becomes one of today's primary tasks.

Keywords: government, corruption, competition, competitiveness, income
